Indxx launches the Indxx Sustainable Environment Index Series

Indxx announces the launch of the Indxx Sustainable Environment Index Series. This index series is comprised of five indices: the Indxx New Energy & Environment Index, the Indxx Developed Markets Climate Change Index, the Indxx Renewable Energy Index and the Indxx Vegan Index (Global and US versions).

While the overarching theme remains the same, the selection and weighting criteria for each of the five indices have been kept distinct to ensure minimal overlap. The indices cover the entire spectrum of sub-themes pertaining to a sustainable environment, from renewable sources of energy, waste management, energy efficient solutions, vegan food production, to infrastructure providers for climate change and smart grids.

“The previous decade was the warmest in the history of mankind,” said Rahul Sen Sharma, Managing Partner at Indxx. “Governments across the world are intensifying their efforts to curb the emission of greenhouse gases, and many multinational corporations are vowing to rely solely on renewable energy to meet their electricity needs.”

“With the increasingly evident impact of climate change in the form of widespread wildfires in Australia, rising sea-levels, deforestation or the continued record-breaking rise in the Earth’s global surface temperature, we believe the launch of this index series could not have been more aptly timed. Our product team’s core focus was to devise unique investment strategies that intend to benefit from companies focused on mitigating the negative effects of climate change. Additionally, the growing adoption of the vegan trend and its obvious climate-efficient impact made us classify this theme as environmentally sustainable.”
